Dr. SHING FAN LAM, Ph. D.

Dr. Shing Fan Lam was born in Kwangtung Province in 1888. After obtaining a good knowledge in Chinese literature, he went to America to continue his studies in the American Institute of Banking, New York. Many years later, he succeeded to get the Standard Certificate from that institution and there after he was employed by the Anglo-California Trust Company, San Francisco, California, U.S.A., as manager of their Chinese Department. His business ability and wide contact with the Chinese overseas enabled him to be advanced to the position of manager of their Montgomery Street Branch. He was afterwards promoted to Assistant Cashier, and Assistant Vice-president at the time when he resigned in favour of the Bank of China.

Dr. Lam is a man who is always anxious to learn more, so he made use of his leisure hours and continued with his studies and research work in the Lincoln University, San Francisco, where he procure the degree of Ph. D. in Banking Administration.

The Bank of China, Shanghai, offered an attractive position to Dr. Lam. Knowing that such an experienced technical man is beneficial to a banking concern, the Anglo-California Trust Company, California, where Dr. Lam was working, offered a triple increment of salary in order to make Dr. Lam to stay with their institution. But Dr. Lam is a sort of man who always intends to render himself to serve his own nation, so he refused the American Bank and returned to China where he was appointed sub-manager of the Bank of China, Hongkong.

At present, the bank has established a branch in New York City, U.S.A. and Dr. Lam may be sent to extend service in that direction.

Although Dr. Lam is not a rich man, any occasion that concerns charity he is always doing his best to contribute.

Dr. Lam has four children. All of them obtained a thorough education. His oldest daughter acquired the B.S. degree in Home Economics from the University of Nevada, Reno, Nevada. The second daughter graduated from the University of California, in plant genetics, Berkeley, California. His son is studying mechanical Engineering in U.S.A., and his third daughter expects to study police administration or Education in U.S.A.
